Dear Mr. Schwabe:

Since I talked to you about the British Loan when you were in Tulsa, I hope you have had a chance to study the subject further to see the disastrous effects on world trade that would result from refusing the loan.

When business men like

Eric Johnston, Henry Tree and Winthrop Aldrich and the staff of "Forbes Magazine" come out in favor of the loan, it convinces me it is just solid good business, don't you agree?

How can we have prosperity in the U.S. if we cannot trade in all the sterling countries — which will be the outcome of refusing the loan.

I shall watch for your vote on this with interest.

Yours truly,

Evelyn P. Macdonald
