British Loan

Dear Harry:

I am just in receipt of your letter of the 7th instant urging me to continue my opposition to the British loan, which you refer to as a gift. I do not know whether or not we should dignify it to the extent of calling it a gift. I am wondering sometimes if it is not an extortion which the New Deal Administration is trying to force upon the American people. You may rest assured that I am not for this proposition.

It is always nice to hear from you and it is inspiring to follow your line of reasoning which I think very convincing. It inspires me tremendously to have my friends give me the benefit of their thinking.

Trusting that I may have the pleasure of seeing you soon after Congress adjourns, and with all good wishes, I am

Your friend,

George B. Schwabe, M.C.

Dear George -

I do not want to seem selfish but I do want to ask that you continue to oppose the British Loan ⁽⁹⁴⁴⁾ - I will be happy to work hard to earn enough money to pay income tax to support our own country but like the embattled farmers at Concord I do not want to pay income tax to England - and it will take a lot of sacrifice from a lot of small earners like me to pay this tribute to England -

England should be ashamed to ask it of us and if they get it, it means that by our own foolishness they have at this late date defeated the Colonist.

Congrats - Hott - Harry Calom
